

As Many Drivers Are Being Let Go, U.S. Xpress Is Still Hiring

As you know, due to the ongoing COVID-19 crisis, thousands of retailers are closing their doors – including huge companies like Macy's, Nordstrom, Nike, and Apple. In some places, entire malls are shutting down.

Similarly, the restaurant industry is being hit hard. To encourage social-distancing and the spread of COVID-19, some states, including most of the Northeast, are no longer offering dine-in experiences. Though many of them are still providing carry-out service, the rapid increase in self-isolation doesn't make up for their loss.

Relying on those retailers and restaurants for the bulk of their profit, many trucking companies including Sysco, US Foods, Universal, and Lipsey, are also struggling. The result? They are laying off drivers in masses.

On the other hand, with customers like Walmart, Dollar General, and Johnson & Johnson, a huge chunk of our business comes from delivering essential goods to retailers that will remain open. Naturally, the demand for these products is high, so we need to ensure we're maintaining the number of drivers in our fleet.
